MOVIES REPRODUCE POLAR SCENE IN CALIFORNIA

By Central Press

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 27.—In semi-tropical heat, at an old government balloon school at Arcadia, near here, a motion picture company has succeeded in reproducing Admiral Byrd's "Little America"—snow, ice and all.

Cornflakes take the place of snow, gypsum substitutes for ice and a fake airplane crashes realistically, to bring the Antarctic to Hollywood.

Several of Admiral Byrd's dogs appear in these "snow and ice" scenes on the deserts. Arrangements had to be made to keep the huskies in refrigerators between shootings.

Captain Alton B. Parker, one of Admiral Byrd's pilots, arranged the technical details of California's "Little America."

Pretentious Set

The movie sets were among the most pretentious ever constructed. Ice barriers and ice parks made of wood and canvas and gypsum covered three square miles.

Two million five hundred pounds of gypsum was scattered over the set to make the "ice."

For six weeks the movie company, in Arctic clothing, toiled in the sun while filming the Antarctic scenes.

Part of the picture shows an airplane flight from Little America to the south pole. The script calls for the machine to crash. Aviation executives prevailed on the picture studios not to crash a real plane, although the picture people were willing to buy a large trimotor passenger plane and crack it up for "realism."

A duplicate trimotor plane, accurate in external details, was therefore constructed. This the movie folk dropped on its nose on the imitation ice to represent a south polar crash.

So well did the gypsum serve as snow that on one occasion a large transport plane took off from it on skids.

THE SHADOW DANCE
SHE sees her image in the glass,
How fair a thing to gaze upon!
She lingers while the moments run,
With happy thoughts that come and pass.

Like winds across the meadow grass
When the young June is just begun:

She sees her image in the glass—
How fair a thing to gaze upon!

What wealth of gold the skies amass!

How glad are all things 'neath the sun!

How true the love her love has won!

She reckons not that this hour will pass—

She sees her image in the glass.

A LA GIBBONS!

FLOYD GIBBONS, radio entertainer, who is famous for his long-windedness and rapid fire line of chatter, has a rival in City Auditor Harry A. Higgins, who was almost hanging on the ropes by the necessity of reading a voluminous amount of proposed legislation at the commission meeting Thursday night. The city auditor was required to read ordinance after ordinance for nearly two straight hours and may have established a record or something.

BRADFUTE HONORED

David Bradfute, president of the Greene County Farm Bureau, was elected one of six new directors of the Ohio Wool Growers' Cooperative Association, at the closing session of the association's annual convention in the Deshler-Wallick Hotel at Columbus Thursday. The convention was held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Ohio Live Stock Cooperative Association, which was scheduled to elect directors Friday.

A Statement To The Citizens Of Xenia

To the City Commission
City of Xenia,
Xenia, Ohio.

Gentlemen:

Since the last meeting of your Commission, we have found a number of people are circulating around Xenia among the business men and others spreading malicious and untrue statements about The Dayton Power and Light Company, its motives and what it proposes to do here when and as the new five-year franchise finally takes effect.

We want to advise the citizens of Xenia and everybody interested in this matter that a complete set of papers covering the new five (5) year electric franchise and covering the new and lower Domestic Electric Light Rates, the new and lower Commercial Electric Rates, the new and lower Street Lighting prices, the new and lower price for power for pumping water, the price of the new boulevard lighting units, the continuation of the present power rates, the price for traffic signal lights, the intention of the Company not to retail merchandise in Xenia, and the right of the City to cancel all these matters, anytime after one year, have all been prepared by the City Solicitor of Xenia and The Dayton Power and Light Company will sign and accept same as soon as they are properly acted upon by the City Commission and take effect.

The Dayton Power and Light Company definitely commits itself to furnish and install the complete new boulevard lighting system contemplated for any number of boulevard lamps the City Commission may order, all of which are clearly set out on the map accompanying the papers for this work and now in the hands of the City Commission.

The Dayton Power and Light Company will promptly commence the work of removing its poles and wires from certain of the downtown streets and these streets are clearly indicated on the map now in the hands of the City Commission. We want to remind you there are a number of poles and wires on those certain streets that DO NOT belong to The Dayton Power and Light Company but belong to the Bell Telephone Company, The Postal Telegraph Company, The Western Union Telegraph Company, The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and others, and we understand the City Commissioners are fully aware of those other poles and wires and expect to take steps to have them removed, also, if at all possible. The Dayton Power and Light Company has advised the City Commission that it will co-operate in every way possible to have those other poles and wires removed.

For more than one year, The Dayton Power and Light Company has NOT been selling any electric merchandise in Xenia, excepting Frigidaire Electric Refrigerators. In the new franchise, we agree not to engage in retailing merchandise, which also includes Refrigerators, during the new five-year franchise.

Not-with-standing the provision of the ordinance granting a franchise to The Dayton Power and Light Company that it may be cancelled by the City at any time after one year, the Company will proceed promptly to do all the things provided by the various proposed ordinances, believing that the City will be so well satisfied that it will not terminate the franchise.

The Dayton Power and Light Company, in and of itself, is able to fulfill all its undertakings and obligations to the City of Xenia and will faithfully do so in all particulars.

We propose to use Xenia labor wherever possible and will buy material in Xenia when available in carrying the above projects to completion.

Yours Truly,

THE DAYTON POWER AND LIGHT COMPANY

Success Is Theirs in Triple Role Of Wives, Mothers and Stars

Leading Lights of Stage and Screen Assert Woman Can Make Good in Artistic Career, and at the Same Time Succeed Equally as Ideal Mate and Guide for Her Children.

By ALICE ALDEN
NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The stage and screen stars who excel in the most important roles of wife and mother are among the most successful of all artists. And this ought to settle once and for all the old controversy of a theatrical career versus matrimony and motherhood. It has become quite commonplace to read about the stork taking a trip to Hollywood and those whom the wise old bird has visited are continuing on their starry ways.

One of the best of all screen players is delightful Norma Shearer. Clothes, jewels, cars, success—all these are nothing to Norma, compared with the smile of her young babe. She is Mrs. Irving Thalberg, an M-G-M. executive, and he is quite willing to let his wife star in the triple role of screen actress, wife and mother. The new sensation, Marlene Dietrich, is quite emphatic in her statement that marriage and motherhood do not interfere with a career.

She says that she finds it possible to love her husband, her baby and her work and reconcile her three great loves. She is now in Berlin visiting her husband and little daughter, and each year will find lovely Marlene in Germany for a visit of several months.

Irene Rich, who is famous as one of the finest screen actresses, has two daughters at school and is terrifically proud of them, but no more than they are of their clever, beautiful mother.

Florence Vidor, who is married to Jascha Hefetz, the great violinist, is the mother of a baby and also believes that all three careers are compatible.

Gloria Swanson not only has a child, but adopted another one to keep her own company. In her children she finds her greatest joy. She has carefully shielded them from all publicity and says that she will continue to do so as far as it is in her power. There are no pictures of them to be had.

Nancy Carroll, one of the greatest of the present crop of screen stars, is also a most devoted wife and mother and is extremely proud of her author-husband, Jack Kirkland, and her baby.

Although Mary Pickford has no child of her own, she has acted in the status of a mother to her niece, Mary Gwynne Pickford. She adopted her sister's child some time ago and is rearing her carefully. Dolores Costello, who married Jack Barrymore, is also planning to return to the screen. And so she, too, must find a career compatible with wifehood and motherhood. Friends say Miss Costello is more beautiful than ever.

On the stage there are many successful mothers. First and foremost comes Ethel Barrymore, who idolizes and is idolized by her three fine children. To her girl and boys, she is mother, father, pal and chum and highly successful in each and every role.

Helen Hayes has won new laurels since she became a wife and mother. She, and her husband, Charles McArthur, and her baby daughter are as inspiring a trio as one could ever hope to meet. The McArthur baby is as good as she is clever and beautiful, the inordinately proud parents report.

Billie Burke—Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld—has as her inseparable companion her daughter, Patricia, who is now quite a young lady. Billie still looks almost as young as her tall daughter and the two are to be seen laughing and chattering away like a couple of schoolgirls. Patricia is quite dignified and is the idol of Flo Ziegfeld's heart. To watch the three of them at the Ziegfeld home, Berkeley Crest, at Hastings on the Hudson, is to realize how happy a family really can be. And Billie, is starring in a new show, "The Truth Game," with tremendous success.

Fannie Brice is another star who is a devoted mother. Despite her strenuous stage career and other activities, she watched her brood as if she had nothing else to do. Fannie's devotion as a mother is obvious to any visitor at the Brice apartment.

In the musical world there are two women who have won great success both as singers and mothers. They are Ernestine Schumann-Heink, whose fame as a singer is only equalled by her renown as a devoted wife and mother. Then there is Madame Louise Homer, who has two daughters, Louise and Katherine.

A DINING-ROOM TRAGEDY!

TABLES spread with delicious food... most of it soft, highly refined—lacking in the "bulk" and iron your body must have to keep well and strong.

This is the dining-room tragedy that occurs daily in millions of homes. No wonder most people suffer from constipation. No wonder headaches, backaches, and dull days are frequent!

Just add one delicious food to your table—and you will help correct all this suffering. Add Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in some form every day.

ALL-BRAN adds the necessary "bulk" or "roughage"—and iron—that is so often lacking in our diet today. This bulk is needed to prevent constipation—to sweep the system clean of poisonous wastes—to exercise the intestines and keep them healthy.

ALL-BRAN is delicious as a cereal with milk or cream. Sprinkle over other cereals or use in cooking.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In severe cases with each meal. At your grocer's—in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

SHE'S ALL THE PLAY AND THE ACTORS, TOO

RUTH DRAPER as the wife, the private secretary and Mrs. Mallory in "Three Women and Mr. Clifford."

By PAUL SHINKMAN
Central Press Play Reviewer
NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—From a haystack in Switzerland to electric lights on Broadway and other towns in America...

A few summers ago, a young American girl was staring dreamily at the heavens from the top of a haystack in Switzerland. . . . She was, if you must know, the granddaughter of Charles A. Dana, celebrated among American wielders of the Blue Pencil.

Young American girls in Europe are not often to be found dawdling among the haystacks. But it isn't fair to say that this one was dawdling. . . . She was actually thinking about that intriguing phenomenon, the American business man. And along with the American business man, she was thinking about the part that women play in his busy life. . . . Three Women and Mr. Clifford.

Transforms Empty Stage.
The other evening a dark-haired young woman with snapping black eyes and a friendly smile stepped out upon the empty stage of the Comedy theater in West Forty-first Street. A quick hush fell over the audience. Ruth Draper was paying a fleeting visit to New York, which is merely a town among the many for her.

There was no impressive pause or clearing of throat. As though by a strange trick of alchemy, the smiling girl in a simple brown dress became suddenly another young girl miles away. . . . standing respectfully beside the desk of her employer as she went over the day's program. Mr. Clifford's private secretary.

It is an almost uncanny substitution of personalities. Gradually on that empty stage the artist sketches in not only the part she herself is playing, but even Mr. Clifford, the business visitor from out of town, the office girl, the trusty old clerk, and all those others to whom she has occasion to speak. Only the private secretary is heard. . . . but the others are just as truly there. Even the chairs and desks emerge from thin air as Ruth Draper flutters her magic hands over them.

Then, with brief intervening pauses, those other two women who mold the great Mr. Clifford's life make their appearance. . . . cold and haughty Mrs. Clifford herself, and the "other" woman, Mrs. Mallory, who alone seems to understand the man. Three masterpieces, etched by an artist in human media. . . . and with no other tools than a set of white collars and cuffs, an evening wrap and a shawl!

Wrapped in Mystery.
Already a faint air of mystery has begun to wrap itself about this fascinating young woman. . . . concerning whom practically nothing is known except that she was presented at court before Their Majesties, the King and Queen of England, a few seasons ago. Even that little-known fact is kept studiously in the background.

How did she begin? . . . Some say it was at a house party of young people that Ruth Draper first drew on her magic cloak. It fit so well that they got up an entertainment and Ruth "took off" a little Jewish tailor, who had done work for her. . . . improvising as she went along. Then she was "a family dressmaker" and "a German governess."

Ruth Draper, herself, has nothing to say. She speaks only through the mouths and gestures of those living creatures with whom she has peopled the American stage. . . . to say nothing of the stages of Paris and London. There are no "back-stage interviews" or "tea-time chats."

I have seen Paris audiences thrill to this American girl's portrayal of a French saleslady. And Londoners still sit enthralled before that English duchess "Opening a Bazaar." There is no better test of an international art.

THE BETTER WAY
What Children Should Remember About Home

1. That their father and mother love each other.
2. That the reason home was a happy one was because we all worked to keep it so.
3. That each child was given every opportunity to develop his own personality.
4. That each child's personal possessions were inviolable. If kept in the place allotted to them.
5. That the books in the house were to be read if handled right.

The Theater

S. S. Van Dine will write a new crime story as a starring vehicle for Walter Huston in a First National picture but this, his first original for the screen, will not concern his celebrated detective character, Philo Vance.

Van Dine has no contract with First National, but under the terms of an elastic agreement will write the story at home and submit it at his leisure. If the studio doesn't like the story he will turn it into a book, and write another for Huston.

For the benefit of Philo Vance fans, "The Kennel Murder Case," Van Dine's sixth story in the series, will not be finished until fall and will not be finished until fall and will be the last appearance of Vance. He will probably be sent on a trip instead of being killed off.

Marion Lessing
The type that gentlemen prefer.

Van Dine writes his stories with great care, spending a year on each, nine months in plotting the story and three months in writing. He prepares a 40,000 word synopsis first.

Believe it or not, Bill Hart, one-time celebrated two-gun Western star, is also a writing man. He will complete his eighth book within a few weeks. It is "Two Boys and a Girl," a novel of the west, which the former cowboy star has been writing for a year and a half.

Hart is now almost out of touch with pictures, the last Western he saw being "In Old Arizona," which he liked very much. Bill admits his ranch isn't productive of anything much except the hay he feeds his ponies, but he seldom is seen in town.

Harry Bannister, who played his last part as the sheriff in the screen version of the old Belasco success, "The Girl of the Golden West," has been given a new contract by Pathé on the heels of the new contract given his actress.
